

A LOHA ALBATROSS

Francesca
Dryden

A story about love,
pride and family

Kimberlie
Clinthorne-Wong

On the island of O'ahu, the Gathering Place, live thousands of Laysan albatrosses.

This is a story about three very special birds.

Palila has been flying over the ocean for many weeks and feels her home calling to her.

Anuenue dances by herself. She wishes she had someone to dance with, like the other albatross couples.

Anuenue and Palila dance together as the stars and moon light up the sky.

They dance together for many moons,

learning the other's rhythms.

One bright morning, Palila returns to Anuenue. Together they watch as a tiny crack appears on their egg.

Soon more cracks appear on the egg and a fluffy, grey head emerges.

