

FRANCES STICKLEY

HANNAH ABBO

WOLVES WILL NOT BE WOLVES

A MODERN-DAY FEMINIST FAIRY TALE

But as she read the King's Decree that warned her to Be Good...

... a gloom of doom and danger seemed to settle on the woods. And suddenly, the journey to her Grandma's house seemed fraught with Big Bads in the woods and all the rules that she'd been taught.

“Beware, BEWARE!” cried Goldilocks. “The wolf is out today!
You must stick to the path, or you’ll be surely snatched away.
He’s waiting in the deep, dark woods.”

Quick, go on home and hide!”

And she raced towards the nearest house and locked herself inside.

But Red couldn't help but grumble,
“What a silly rule,” she sighed,
“when the wolf can wander anywhere,
why should I stay inside?”

“... It’s time we threw the rulebook at the Big, Bad Wolf himself.”

Don’t eat other people!
It’s a horrid thing to do.
And don’t expect the world to change the way we act, for you.

We won’t be scared and silent.

We won’t be stuck indoors.

“Together, as we grow, we’ll change their minds...
... We’ll change the laws.”

