

WHERE'S THE PAIR?

a spotting book

Britta Teckentrup

B
I
G
P
I
C
T
U
R
E
P
R
E
S

Down from a fir tree,
a birdie descends,
joining a flock
of feathery friends.

Stretching their wings out
and tweeting together,
which of the flock
are birds of a feather?

These glittery fish
with their rainbow of scales,
dart through the water,
swishing their tails.

Twisting and turning,
this shoal loves to play.
Which pair are heading
in the wrong way?

A dazzle of zebras,
each one black and white,
are camouflaged well
by their stripes dark and light.

Although all their patterns
are similar types,
which two are sporting
identical stripes?

