The Golden Fleece

If you look carefully at the night sky, you may notice three bright stars that make up Aries the ram, with his long outling horns. Censuries ago, people pointed at these stars and told toles of a magical fleece and a great band of herees who travelled the seas in search of it.

 $\star \star \star$ Long ago, King Athamas ruled the kingdom of Boeotia in central Greece, with his wife, Nephele, goddess of the clouds. The couple had two children – Phrisus and his twin sizer Helle – but their marriage was not a happy one. Soon, Athamas fell in love with Inc, princess of Thebes, abandoned Nephele and morried Ino instead. Sadly for the doting king, jealous Ino hated her two stepchildren and spent her days devising a plan to be rid of them once and for all.

One night, she ordered her servant to light a fire beneath the grain store. The flames scorched the precious seeds, so that they died as soon as they were
