SALLY (CONT'D)
(GROANS)

INT. DR. FINKELSTEIN'S HOUSE - NIGHT

Jack starts to exit into the wilderness. Sally steps out from behind the tombstone, then she looks up at the off-screen cliff. Sally turns, then she looks down sadly and holds her hands across her heart.

SALLY
Jack, I know how you feel.

Sally walks and exits. Sally staggers between the tombstones, then she drops down to her knees. Sally, kneeling, looks at three tombstones, which have various herbs growing in front of them. The signs on the tombstones read: hembane, witch hazel, deadly nightshade. Sally starts to pick some of the deadly nightshade plants.

INT. DR. FINKELSTEIN'S HOME/KITCHEN - NIGHT

Sally drops the nightshade plants into a jar, which sits on a shelf. The lettering on the jar reads: Deadly Nightshade. Sally puts the jar on a shelf. Dr. Finkelstein's shadow crosses on the wall above a staircase. Sally turns and stares at the shadow.

DR. FINKELSTEIN
Sally!

Dr. Finkelstein enters as he rolls down the staircase on his wheelchair.

DR. FINKELSTEIN (CONT'D)
You've come back.

Sally stares at Dr. Finkelstein.

SALLY
I had to.

DR. FINKELSTEIN
For this.

Dr. Finkelstein's arm enters as he holds up Sally's arm.

SALLY
Yes.

FROM PAPER TO PUPPET

Tim Burton's stop-motion animation is a unique blend of art and science. The process involves creating puppets from various materials, including paper, wood, and fabric. Each puppet is meticulously crafted and then brought to life through the use of stop-motion photography. The result is a world of characters that are both charming and terrifying.

JACK (CONT'D)
Sally, please go to bed.

JACK (CONT'D)
I need some of them.

Jack's hands hold over the book to a picture of Santa Claus, who Finn places the eye with excitement behind the glass. Jack's finger moves at the controls.

DR. FINKELSTEIN
Well, their construction should be essentially simple, I think.

JACK (CONT'D)
You've never met Christmas? Well, that's a pity.

JACK
The paper evolves to his characteristic form.

The bell.

JACK
Oh, how jolly and festive!

JACK (CONT'D)
A bell, a chime, and a beautiful voice and I'll be there.

MAKING CHRISTMAS
(Part 2)

This time, this time, this time, this time
Making Christmas
Making Christmas
La la la

It's almost here and we can't wait
So ring the bells and celebrate
'Cause when the fall moon starts to climb
We'll all sing out
"It's Christmastime!"

Camera moves past Sally to Dr. Finkelstein, who sits in his wheelchair and stares at her.

Shall we, then?

Sally walks up the staircase. Dr. Finkelstein then follows her up the staircase.

INT. DR. FINKELSTEIN'S HOUSE/LABORATORY - NIGHT

Camera dollies past some test tubes and tables in the laboratory.

That's twice this month you've slipped deadly . . .

Camera continues to dolly to reveal Sally, strapped to an operating table, and Dr. Finkelstein, who sits beside her in his wheelchair. Dr. Finkelstein has sewn Sally's arm back onto her body.

. . . nightshade into my tea and run off.

Sally, strapped to the operating table, smirks at Dr. Finkelstein, who sits in the wheelchair.

SALLY
Three times.

Dr. Finkelstein leans menacingly toward Sally.

DR. FINKELSTEIN
You're mine, you know. I made you with my own two hands.

Sally gestures at Dr. Finkelstein.

SALLY
You can make other creations. I'm restless. I can't help it.

DR. FINKELSTEIN
It's a phase, my dear. I'll pass.

Dr. Finkelstein bites down on a thread as he finishes sewing on Sally's arm. Sally looks at him.
