

2025 July to Dec Export

Celebrate the achievements made in medical engineering and take a glimpse into the future.

- Winner of the 2024 SLA Information Book Award Judges' Choice Category 8-12
- As told by UK Sepsis Ambassador Patrick TJ Kane
- Phenomenal artwork by highly acclaimed artist Samuel Rodriguez
- The first of its kind - a book that celebrates the history of medical implantables and prosthetics
- The forefront of diversity - featuring stories from celebrities and people around the world

THE FIRST PROSTHESES

For as long as humans have been around, we have been losing limbs, or are born without them. Whether due to an injury or congenital impairment (a condition that is present from birth), people have been trying to replace missing arms, legs, fingers and hands for thousands of years. Early prostheses were revolutionary for their time, and their inventors did not bring the technology needed to provide better functionality and comfort. Even so, some of these early prostheses closely resemble those that exist today.

Count Götz von Berlichingen (right), the most famous example of an early prosthesis, is that belonging to the German knight, Count Götz von Berlichingen, who lost his hand during battle in the early 1500s. Underneath, Count Götz asked for craftsmen to create an iron hand with hinges, levers and muscles that could lock into place, so he could hold a knight's sword as a weapon. His plan for his hand became so famous, that some people believe it inspired the plot, to be used in an iron fist.

The earliest known example of a prosthetic iron artificial body part belonged to an Egyptian mummy over 2,600 years old. This wooden prosthesis replaced the big toe on her right foot, and even had a ridge on the inside of a heel carved into it to make it appear more realistic. It would have been strapped onto her foot with string, and inventors believe that it would have greatly aided her balance.

The earliest written mention of a prosthesis dates to around 771 BC, and describes the iron hand belonging to the Roman general Marcus Sergius. Sergius was said to be one of the finest generals of the Roman Republic because of his bravery in battle. Across two campaigns he was wounded 23 times, resulting in the loss of his right hand. Sergius's replacement hand was strapped to his arm, perhaps allowing him to hold a shield for future battles.

HOW PACEMAKERS WORK

Pacemakers are small devices that monitor and regulate the electrical impulses controlling the heart. Beyond, the heart requires its own timing through a network of cells that carry electrical currents. These cells are coordinated by something called the sinoatrial node, which is often referred to as the 'natural pacemaker'. Medical conditions that affect the sinoatrial node, or any of the cells under its control, can be diagnosed and require a pacemaker to correct them.

There are different types of pacemaker for different heartbeats, but for basic ones, pacemakers are the same by sending electrical impulses only when irregular heartbeats are detected, sometimes using the rate of the respiratory rate and using the heart's functioning as a guide.

Inside the pacemaker box

The battery inside a pacemaker is usually made of lithium, silver, and sodium chloride. It is usually about 10 centimeters long and 5 centimeters wide.

1. The pacemaker box is connected to the heart by wires.
2. The wires include leads that carry electrical impulses to the heart.
3. The pacemaker sends electrical impulses to the heart to regulate its rhythm.

PROSTHETIC HANDS THROUGH THE AGES

Hands are one of our most valuable and versatile body parts. We use them to pick up objects, use tools and feel textures, but also to communicate and bond with others through touch and emotional gestures. It comes as no surprise that humans have been desperate to replicate hands for those who were born without them, or lost them through accidents, injury or disease. Because of the high priority of tasks we use our hands for, this has been an incredibly challenging task as technology to look back as over 300 years of advancement.

Robert Galley (middle), 1790. Galley's hand was made of wood and leather. It was designed to be used for writing and other tasks. It was one of the first prosthetic hands that could be used for a wide range of activities.

Johnnie (right), 1970. Johnnie was a prosthetic hand made of metal and plastic. It was designed to be used for grasping objects and holding tools. It was one of the first prosthetic hands that could be used for a wide range of activities.

Hand 2.0 (left), 2010. Hand 2.0 is a prosthetic hand made of metal and plastic. It was designed to be used for grasping objects and holding tools. It was one of the first prosthetic hands that could be used for a wide range of activities.

BEYOND BIONICS

So far, bionic devices have been playing catch-up with the body parts they are trying to emulate. While the devices available today have changed lives, they are still not as multi-functional, reliable and efficient as the organs and limbs that biology has provided. As we look at the rapid advancements that have been made since the start of the last century, we can be certain that technology will improve. However, instead of asking how we can replace an arm, leg or eye, the question engineers ask today is "How can we improve upon what an arm, leg or eye is?"

Science and technology will continue to provide new options that are less expensive, more durable and better at copying what humans can do. But there may come a point where we will ask what exactly makes a 'good' limb. For example, a bionic arm is currently slower and less versatile than a human one. It needs to be charged and can't be submerged under water. But already bionic hands can hold onto objects that are very hot or cold without damaging themselves, which human hands cannot. A human leg can position itself on uneven ground without needing to go for maintenance, but running prostheses of the future may allow humans to run far quicker than biology ever could. There is no need to stop there – the fastest prosthetic leg of the future could even have wheels and an engine.

As technology continues to challenge what is possible, it is the human brain that will become the limiting factor. Where do we stop? Is there a limit? Different prostheses for specific tasks may become as commonplace as changing into running shoes or putting on scuba-diving equipment.

Looking further ahead, it could be possible to replace all of our body parts with bionics. Neurons in the brain could become fibre optic cables and muscles could be replaced with synthetic fibres capable of moving faster than a biological muscle. The difficult question we would then face is what that means for being human, and that, no one yet has an answer to.

On The Streets of Paris

A vibrant, illustrated poetry series celebrating cities around the world. This beautiful book takes a tour through the captivating streets of Paris.

- Each book in the On the Streets series is written by a poet from the city who will be able to celebrate the hidden parts of the city, as well as the main landmarks
- The poetry spreads act as a snapshot of a different part of the city. A non-fiction spread at the back of the book adds further information about landmarks and history
- Beautifully presented and produced with strong branding and a collectable feel
- Aimed at young readers aged 7+ and perfect for reading aloud together

On The Streets of Paris

Baguette The Rules

If you buy the baguette,
The rule is you get to eat it and a loaf,
just the top,
on the way home.

The rule is the baguette will never make a home with its head just on.
It would be wrong
very wrong.

The rule is you walk out of the bakery and whatever sticks out at the warm paper stays in years to eat.

To break it,
and eat it,
it's wrong.
You've earned it.

Cafe life

Today I'm feeling extremely Parisian.
So I'd better show myself to the tourists,
I shall wave my chee thing, and I shall take a book,
and I shall wave my nonchalance book,
I shall sip a small coffee at a cafe nearby,
an terrace, with the wind in my face,
and it will be the end of the book-age.

Every detail must be right. The program must suit.
The water must be cold, and my cheeks must be rosy,
and I'll stare at the book, and I'll stare at the sky,
and sometimes I'll sigh,
and I won't notice you taking photos of me,
or taking about me,
or talking about me,
and I'll live on forever in your stories of Paris, lightly with anyone.

"You can't see her, she was like, so chee?
She had, like, a book?
and a nonchance book?
and she was sipping coffee?
at a cafe nearby?
and those Parisians, um cafe, um thing,
at play oh yes?"

It's being it's a job. It's a duty. It's a mission, that whole thing of being, sometimes, a Parisian.

Bouquinistes

A little green historic treasure chest left by a workaholic, street-sure booklover, grasped against the gutter along the Seine,
its end page open at the first sign of rain.

It's called a bouquiniste. Don't quote me on it.
Bouquiniste happens. Don't quote me on it.
And the great, and Paris Art, and break! It's a bit like magic, how it all fits in that box. There must be a trick.

My favourite things here are the tiny old books wrapped in cellophane plastic, the price is still to be seen. I had it, sometimes, something that came,
the care it took to wrap those books.

So that, the only good reason want to write a book is that maybe one day it will end up at a bouquiniste.
Wrapped in plastic, with the price in felt tip on it.

Hello Eiffel Tower

Hello Eiffel Tower here you are peeking round the corner of that street always playing hide-and-seek you are never where I think you are never where I expect to see you never the size you should be never the right angle. Tell me how do you lift that steely A of yours so swiftly from nowhere to me, when I wasn't thinking of you, wasn't feeling playful. Tell me now.

Now I'm ready for another game trickster tower jungle gym for clouds tourist monkey puzzle cheeky queen count to ten and you'll be gone again.

A laugh-out-loud rhyming romp about how being HANGRY really makes you feel!

- Bringing debut author Kathryn Wanless as well as established, commercial talent Fred Blunt to the Templar list with his wit and humour.
- Exploring a theme that isn't currently seen in the picture book market - there are plenty of books about being hungry OR angry, but not both!
- This story uses humour as a conversation starter for children to talk about the very real, intense emotions that come with hunger.
- The book acts as a reminder that we all get hangry, even grown-ups, but it's how we deal with those feelings that matters.
- Cover treatment: matt lam, SPUV and pantone.

Old Bear's Five-Minute Bedtime Stories

A timeless collection of short bedtime tales and poems from Jane Hissey's best-selling Old Bear and Friends series!

- Jane Hissey's teddy bear tales are packed with heartfelt humour, nostalgia and vintage illustrations, making it the perfect bedtime story for children up to 5 years old.
- Perfect for Christmas gifting, this collection includes some beautiful wintry adventures, such as the toys organising a winter picnic, hosting a Christmas fancy dress party, and befriending a new adorable snowman teddy!

Old Bear's Five-Minute Bedtime Stories

IT WAS nearly Christmas. The toys all knew this because the children were very busy decorating the house. They were too busy to play and they wouldn't let any of the toys help with the decorations.

'You're a bit small to decorate the tree,' they said to Little Bear.

'And you can't reach to hang paper chains.'

They wouldn't even let Old Bear help to put up the fairy lights. It wasn't much fun at all for the toys.

'We haven't been able to do anything,' grumbled Little Bear. 'I would have loved to help make the house look Christmassy.'

'They should have saved the low-down jobs for us,' said Rabbit.

'What low-down jobs?' asked Duck. 'There aren't any really, are there?'

'There's the pot the Christmas tree stands in,' said Little Bear, 'that's low down and it's always decorated.'

They all rushed to the Christmas-tree pot only to find that it had just been wrapped in red paper and tied with a big green bow.

8

'There's nothing left for us to do,' said Little Bear. 'And I have been practising bows all week.'

Then he noticed the dolls' house. Standing in the corner of the playroom, it had been completely forgotten. There were no paper chains in the rooms, no Christmas tree with presents underneath, and no holly over the pictures. It looked just as it did all the rest of the year.

'Why haven't you decorated your house?' Little Bear asked the dolls in the dolls' house. 'It doesn't look very festive.'
