Earthlings

PLANET EARTH

Earth is a rather ordinary planet located on the outskirts of the Universe. Its inhabitants, known as Earthlings, hold a deep belief that their planet is exceptional.

Earth is one of trillions of planets that exist in the Universe.
It orbits around a star Earthlings call the Sun.

Earth isn't a particularly distinctive planet. It's one of the smaller bodies in its Solar System and is 11 times smaller than Jupiter.

There are billions of Earth-like planets in the Universe. They are similar in size to Earth and all orbit their own stars, in the same way Earth orbits the Sun.

Around the World in 80 Inventions

Ice Cream

"Dreaming from dessert"

14

One of the oldest sweet treats goes back to the ancient Greeks. Around 350 BCE, the Greeks made a sweet drink called 'ice cream' from snow and honey. The Romans later added fruit and spices. In the 17th century, French chefs refined the recipe, creating the 'ice cream' we know today. The first ice cream parlour was opened in London in 1662. Today, ice cream is a popular treat enjoyed by people of all ages.

Easy Ice Cream

Bicycle

"Freedom on two wheels"

15

Did you know that the first bicycle was called a 'velocipede'? It was invented in 1817 by Baron von Drais. The velocipede was a simple wooden frame with two large wheels and no handlebars. It was used for short-distance travel. The modern bicycle was developed in the 1880s, featuring a chain drive and pneumatic tires. Today, bicycles are a popular mode of transport and recreation.

Petition Penny-Farthing

Camera

"Tag along"

24

Although it's not new, the camera is a fascinating invention. The first camera was invented in 1826 by Nicéphore Niépce. It was a simple box with a lens and a light-sensitive plate. The first photograph, 'View from the Window at Le Gras', was taken in 1826. Today, cameras are used for everything from photography to video recording.

Developed to Perfection

High-Speed Train

"10-speed"

25

Before the high-speed train, the fastest mode of transport was the steam locomotive. The first high-speed train was the Trans Europ Express, which ran between Paris and Brussels in 1934. Today, high-speed trains are used for long-distance travel and are much faster than traditional trains.

Marvelous Maglevs

Wind Turbine

"Harnessing the power of wind"

34

You might have seen a wind turbine up on a hill. It's a device that converts the kinetic energy of the wind into mechanical or electrical energy. The first wind turbine was invented in 1890 by James B. Francis. Today, wind turbines are used for generating electricity and pumping water.

Green Energy

Helicopter

"A sailing way to fly"

35

While it might seem like a modern invention, the helicopter has a long history. The first helicopter was invented in 1783 by the Montgolfier brothers. Today, helicopters are used for a variety of purposes, including transport, rescue, and entertainment.

Versatile VTOLs

Wheel

"The revolutionary design that makes the world go round"

17

Can you imagine a world without wheels? Apart from sledges and ships, there would be no vehicles – no carts, cabs, bikes, buses, trucks, trains, or aeroplanes. The first wheeled vehicles were animal-drawn carts with solid wooden wheels. They were invented in Mesopotamia (modern-day Iraq) around 3500 BCE. The wheel was a revolutionary invention that changed the world.

Potter's Wheel

Internet

"The world at your fingertips"

18

The invention of the Internet – a network of computers that 'speak' to each other – was a concentrated effort in the United States. The first computers were connected to each other in 1969, but scientists first began developing the Internet in the early 1970s during the Cold War (1947–1991), a time of heightened hostility between the USSR and the United States and when computers were the size of an entire room.

Arboretum Mini Gift

Boreal Conifers

One of the most ancient tree species, conifers are synonymous with boreal forests. Densely packed green firs, spruces and pines all tower high above the dark, damp ground below, while in autumn, the larch brightens up the scene with a warm golden glow.

Conifer basically means 'cone-bearing' and instead of flowers, these trees produce seeds in cones. Conifers are evergreen which means they start producing food as soon as they wake up after the winter and don't have to wait for new needles to grow. The larch is the odd one out. Being a deciduous conifer it loses its needles each year. However, larches have delicate needles compared to evergreen conifers, so they are quicker and easier to grow.

Although their growth is slow, conifers have adapted to be able to cope with the harsh weather. Their recognisable narrow, conical-shaped canopies are made up of flexible branches that sweep outwards. This design helps to shed heavy snowfall and reduce the potential damage to the branches from snow and strong winds.

TEMPERATE CONIFER FORESTS

Boreal Broadleaves

Although boreal forests, or 'taiga', are dominated by conifers, there is also a very small but hardy selection of broadleaved trees present, including poplars, willows and birches.

While generally short-lived species, rarely reaching 100 years, these trees have many characteristics that help them survive in the taiga. They can all grow, flower and fruit during the short summer, and then shed their leaves at just the right moment to prepare for the long winter. Their compact leaves have a small surface area, which means they can be produced quickly – ideally suited for a forest with a short growing season – and they are also able to withstand strong winds.

The broadleaved trees grow near water, making the most not only of the available moisture there, but also the light levels around lakes and rivers where there is no competition from the dense-leaved conifers. In the northern tundra, these trees are short and stunted but further south, towards the temperate broadleaved forest, they have straighter trunks and grow taller.

Redwoods

The majestic redwoods are record-breaking conifers and include some of the largest and tallest trees on Earth. One impressive coast redwood called 'Hyperion' has reached the dizzying height of just over 115m. The oldest specimen on record is estimated to be 3,500 years old.

The dawn redwood grows in China, while the giant and coast redwoods grow in North America. The North American species are never found together: the coast redwoods grow in the fog belts of the Pacific coastline and the giant redwoods in open grassland further inland, on the western slopes of the Sierra Nevada mountains. Both trees have extremely wide trunks, defined by spongy, cinnamon-red bark, growing up to 60cm thick, and their evergreen branches start high up the trunk, which protects them from forest fires.

Unlike the two North American redwoods, the Chinese dawn redwood is a deciduous conifer with flat, feathery needle-like leaves and reddish-brown, fluted bark. Incredibly, it was first discovered in 1941 as a 150-million-year-old fossil tree dating from the Mesozoic Era. A few years later, a living specimen was found in Central China. Seeds were collected and distributed to arboreta around the world, where they grew today.

TEMPERATE BROADLEAF FORESTS

Habitat: Temperate Broadleaf Forest

Temperate deciduous forests make up some of the world's most dramatic biomes. These forests produce dappled light at the start of the growing season, transforming to lush greens, then bursting into blazing reds, oranges, yellows and browns before their leaves drop, leaving bare, skeletal structures to face the cold months ahead.

These magnificent forests occur mainly in the mid-latitude parts of the globe, encompassing parts of the United States, Canada, Europe, China, Korea, Japan and Russia and South America. All of these regions have four seasons, with no season getting too hot or too cold.

Annually, all these forests share similar genera of tree species, which include oaks, maples, beeches and ashes, but also have their own native species in each region. Beneath these forest giants, smaller shade-tolerant species such as dogwoods and sourwoods fill the understorey and shrub layers, mingling with ferns and mosses to create perfect hidden habitats for birds and small mammals. The forest floor itself is full of insects and fungi, who enjoy the rich, fertile soil created by falling leaves and decaying wood.

Which silhouette matches this Spinosaurus?

Answers

Spinosaurus aegyptiacus
Mid Cretaceous, Egypt
Length: 18m, Weight: 5000kg
Spinosaurus was one of the largest land predators ever. However, unlike other big predators of the Cretaceous period, its skull was long and narrow and full of conical teeth that were ideal for spearing fish.
