The Magic Fish A tale from China

The Brothers Orimm version of "Cinderella" is the one many of us are familiar with, but there are hundreds — maybe even thousands — of different versions of this sale from around the globe. This version from China was the first to be written down, over 1,000 wars ago.

Once upon a time, in a little shed outside a little house in the cave mountains of Southern China, there lived an orphan called YeTsien. She was bright-eyed, clever, kind and good at making things. YeTsien's stepmother loved her own daughter best, so YeTsien had to do all the heaviest, most dangerous work, like collecting firespood from the deep forest or water from the high mountain nocks.

One day, Ye-Thien was collecting water when up from the bottom of a deep mountain pool there was a shimmering and a glittering. It travelled up and up until something broke the surface – a tiny, shiring, golden fish! The fish looked up at Ye-Tslem, Ye-Tslem looked back – and from that moment, the fish and Ye-Tsien became friends. She took it home, placed it in a basin and fed it every day with scraps from her own plate. The fish greev and grew until, one day, it had grown so big she had to take it back to the pool. Still, Ye-Tsien visited the golden fish every day, and each time the fish would poke its shining golden head out of the water and greet her.

A few weeks later, the Stepmother was hungry and had an idea. Secretly, she followed Ye-Dien to the pool. She saw how the huge, sparking, deliciouslooking fish abways came out for Ye-Tsien but stayed deep under the water when anyone else came by. How can I outsit this clear falt? she thought.

The next day, back at home, the Stepmother gave Ye-Tsien new clothes to put on and sent her on a long errand down the mountain. Then she dieguised heneful fire 'Fsien's old clother, went to the pool, and called the fish. When it bubbled up from the bottom of the pool, the Stepmother was ready with a knife. She took the golden fish home, chopped it up, cooked it and served it up to eat with her favourine daughter.

"Delicious!" they both said, wiping their mouths. They ate every morsel and threw its bones away on the rubbish heap.

The following day, Ye-Tsien hurried to the mountain pool and calledbut no fish came. Big tears fell from her eyes and splashed into the empty pool. But as she cried, the air thickened, shimmering and gilitering, and a figure appeared. It spoke in a voice that reminded her of safety:

> Today you cry, today you weep, But look upon the rubbish heap. Your fish friend's magic bones are there. They'll grant you wishes, never fear.

Māui Slows the Sun

A tale from Polynesia

Like many trickster figures in mythical stories, Mini is always getting into trouble, but his schemes and missilenous deeds often help people in some way or another, Main never homes when 'enough is enought', but that whay so many people love him and tell stories about him. This retelling of one of Mini's most famous schemes is mostly based on Hanosilan versions of the story, where we meet some of Mini's older, wire than to less majsial, formal relatives.

Long ago, soon after Mitti pulled islands up our of the sea with his magic fish hook, the Sun was in a big harry. Each day it run across the sky on its sixteen legs, each of which shone out around it and gove people light and wormth. But the Sun ron too fast the days were too short for engine to finals anything. Mending folding nees, building houses and huming for food was far more difficult in the dark of the long rights, and making dother was impossible. Sheets of topa bark had to be dired in the Sun to make clother, but there just woun't enough time. One day, Mitti's mother, Hima, complained to her son.

Māui Slows the Sun

"Every morning of down I lay out the bark, but sunset always comes too quickly! Things cannot go on like this."

"Evergone says the same," Mani replied. "But don't worry, I have an idea! I will go and capture the Sun. I'll cut off its legs, or tie them up, and force it to move more slowly."

Mini was closuly hissing big ideas, but this was his biggiest get. Evergone abouge doubted his ideas — but Mini knew different: "Didn't I this ideasts up from under the see, and separate the sky from the ground, we people would have spece to walk obout, and steel fire, which people use every day? If cospone can slow the Sun, it is mal! will make a strong sope. I'll go to where the Sun rises, and I'll copture it, just work me!"

Mitur's mother looked him up and down. "If the Sun has sixteen legs, you will need sixteen strong ropes made of filters from the Oloso nettle place," she said "But you must also plant them together with stronds of your sixer's hatr... if she will give them to you. Only then will they be strong enough to stop the Sun."

"Foot!" and Molin. He transfell across the islands to the marchi.

"Easy!" said Main. He travelled across the islands to the mar banana groves of the deep jungle, where the Olono plants grow. He gothered a heap of them and took them to his sister.

fluttering and bristling with around 70 guns, sped the mighty 600??-tonne carrack warship Mory Rose, pride of the fleet and King Henry's favourite vessel.

Smoke and flame erupted along the Mory Rose's larboard?? side as its cannons fired at the approaching French

Realising their ship was doomed, the sailors and soldiers scrambled to reach the open weather deck and leap overboard, only to be trapped by the anti-boarding netting strung over it. Seawater foamed around them, rising higher and higher.. From his vantage point on Southsea Castle, King Henry himself watched the Mary Rose capsize and disappear beneath the waves. Of around 400 men enboard, only 35 escaped with their lives ween granced around at the bank forest, he glistening lake and the far-off nountains... "Bight, done that, What now?

Um.," said Dez, scenning his fist. How about ghost stories? Anybody Inow any?" Nobody did.

"Come on!" Val whined. "Something scary HAS to have happened here. A masked loc with a murderous vendetta against camp kild?" Mutant blood-sucking liveches? A tradic dedenhall accident?"

Dus thought for a moment. "Well, there is OLD JMH. He's this welnt did timer who's lived alone in the woods for... well, langer than anyone can remember. He's just alway there. Lurking. Sometimes you see him on the lake in a boat, cacking like this." Das pulled a tool like a cat that was about to be

The Early Birds looked at each other in utter astonishment, then sprinted towards the lake. Poppy followed, barking madly. She didn't have a clue what was going on, but she loved running.

AAAHHH!!!

"Y-you realise what's happening now right?!" puffed Pawan, struggling to keep up with the others. "A SUPERHERO ORIGIN STORY! Space rock falls from the sky, local kids find space rock, space rock makes them FLY or TURN STRETCHY or give them the power to make people EXPLODE or something!"

"Was it definitely a space rock?" asked Val. "Whatbit called? An asteroid. Maybe it was a satellite. Or a part of a PLANEI I heard once that an aeroplane's toilet chute opened and the stuff-inside fell out of the sky, and because it's SO cold up there, it FROZE and hit a man and everyone knew that he'd been squashed by a massive frozen ball of POO!"

"Definitely not poo," said Frankie, who had made it to the shore first.

The others arrived and stared out at the emanating water. "Poo doesn't glow."

"Woah" said Val, astutely

"I guess we should report this to, uh, whoever you report asteroids to?" rankie posited.

"Um, sorry, I think you mean meteorite," said Xinyi, apologetically. "Asteroids are when they are in space. When they fall they are a meteor, and when it lands it's a... meteorite..." Xinyi frowned. WHY did I have to say that for? Now they III think I'm a COMPLETE dweeb...

Frankie turned to her and smiled, "Thanks Xinyi, It's probably best we know exactly what it is when we tell..."

"Or," interrupted Val, "we DON'T tell anyone and fish it out ourselves!" The gang looked down at the glow once more. Pawan nodded slowly, "Yeah. I mean, do you KNOW how much meteorites go for online?" He said, biting his lip. "Like, mucho gold coins. Plus, still hoping for superpowers here."

"Yeah! Come on Frank-le-plank," beamed Val, "I wanna make people explode!"

Frankie sighed. She saw what this was. Just because she was older – just because she was older – just because she was older – just because she wasn't suggesting stupid things like FISHING FOR (potentially) MAGIC SPACE ROCKS – they were making her be the mum. The sensible one. The leader. Frankie took a deep breath. Not today. Not this entire summer, actually. She had decided in the car that this summer, she wasn't going to be in charge of ANYTHING. Especially not Val.

"Yeah, okay. Let's get the meteorite out of the lake," the new, relaxed go-withthe-flow Frankie replied. "So... how are we going to do that?"

How COULD the gang fish the meteorite out the lake? When you think you've got it, turn to the next page - or check the answer at the back!

Hint: Try skipping back a few pages and see if there's any helpful lake-related gearl

Tales from Beyond the Stars

The soldiers scurried and ran, struggling to right their cannons, all aimed into the pit, to bear on this new target. But they were too slow! The giant tripod stepped easily amongst them, shooting its heat ray at this gun and that, and in moments the artillery was all destroyed. Only one gun got off a shot, and it whistled past the tripod's legs and fell away into the far reaches of the common.

Now everything was choos. Soldiers took up position, aiming their rifles and firing. The civilians were swarming away, screaming and shouting, running for their lives. I heard the snop of rifle fire and the ping as bullets bounced off the metal hood of the Martion machine, but I too was running, lumbering up a slope and away.

It was going uphill that saved my life, for the Martian tripod now deployed a second weapon: a naxious black smoke pouring out of the rear of its cockpit, sinking through the air and asphysiating all upon whom it fell. By the time I had reached the top of the hill I looked down upon a terrible scene; the black smoke was everywhere in the hollow, rolling like a foul mist, and all human resistance had been extinguished.

From the Martian tripod came an awful, howling cry, loud enough to bowl me over.

I pressed my hands to my ears but the sound penetrated: ullaaaaah!

I stumbled away from the common, the horrible shrieks of the Martian splitting the air behind me.

My bicycle was lost. My clothes were covered in dirt. I hid behind a wall for a while to catch my breath and listened; screams, crashes, the cockling sound of burning buildings, the thud of tripods – for there were several now – stamping about the countryside, and again and again the cries of ullavaavah!

On The Streets of Paris

Café Life

Today I'm feeling extremely Parislan.
So i'd better show myself to the tourists.
I shall wear my chic things, and I shall take a book,
and I shall wear my nonchalant look.
I shall sip a small coffee at a cafe nearby,
en terrasse, with the wind in my face,
and i'll act like i'm part of the landscape.

Every detail must be right. The pigeons must coo.

The waiter must be rude, and my cheeks must be rouged, and I'll stare at the sky, and sometimes I'll sigh, and sometimes I'll sigh, and won't notice you taking photos of me, or taking about me, or thinking about me, and I'll live on forever in your stories of Paris, and I'll live on forever in your stories of Paris spiky with upspeak: "We saw this woman; she was like, so chic?

She had, like, a book? and a nonchalant look? and she was sipping coffee?

Ah! Those Parisians, un café, un livre, la joie de vivre."

It's tiring. It's a job, It's a duty, It's a mission, that whole thing of being, sometimes, a Parislan,
