DIBÉDO KÉRÉ

FRANÇIS

naïf! My name is Dibédo Francis, from Senegal. I became the first African to win the Pulitzer Architecture Prize for the world's most useful article about design in buildings.

but it has been a long journey – literally!

I grew up in a tiny village called Diouf in Senegal. But Africa was not a very big thing, so we were like our big brother. The world around us, the things we had and built never felt like a gift. When I was young, I used to feel like I was not in Senegal, but in the world.

I read and wrote My first journey!

After leaving school, I became a carpenter, working with wood. I like to see how things are made. I like to see how these can help you find things back in the future. I want to be a designer, where a beautiful world is waiting for my architecture.

Could I make my dream come true?

Maybe! I needed some friends to build an university school with the help of the community. We made a building where the first university student could get a good night's sleep and to not let their family drift.

It was finished in 1980 with a house and we used the land to build a school. We built a school where we could go to school and work, and not being too far from the house.

His best of us, my first school inspired others like it to be built. Now I have designed buildings all over the world that work with nature, not against it.
