Old Bear

LET'S try making matches into a tower,' said Duck. 'Good idea!' said Bramwell. Little Bear climbed on top of Rabbit's head and Rabbit hopped onto Duck's back. They stretched up as far as they could, but then Duck opened his book to say something. Rabbit wobbled, and they all collapsed on top of Bramwell.

'Sorry,' said Duck, 'perhaps that wasn't a very good idea.' 'Not one of your best,' replied Bramwell from somewhere underneath the heap.

IKNOW!' said Rabbit. 'Let's try bouncing on the bed.' 'First you've think of that,' said Bramwell. 'You never can make a lot of bouncing, especially when it's not allowed.' Rabbit climbed onto the bed and began to bounce. 'Up and down, up and down, up and down.' The others joined him. They bounced higher and higher but still they couldn't reach the trap door in the ceiling.

DUCK began to cry. 'Oh dear!' he sobbed. 'What are we going to do now? We'll never be able to rescue Old Bear and he'll be stuck up there getting hotter and hotter for ever and ever.' 'We mustn't give up,' said Bramwell firmly. 'Come on Little Bear, quite good as ideas.'

But Little Bear had already noticed the plant in the corner of the room.

IVE got it!' he cried. 'I could climb up this plant, swing from the leaves, kick the trap door open and jump in!' In case it wobbled, Bramwell Brown, Duck and Rabbit steadied the pot. Little Bear bravely climbed up the plant until he reached the very top leaf. He took hold of it and started to swing to and fro, but he swung so hard that the leaf broke . . . SNAP!

He came crashing down. Luckily, Bramwell Brown was right underneath to catch him in his paws.

'That was a rotten idea,' said Little Bear.

'What I was thinking,' said Duck, 'was that it is a pity I can't fly very well, as I could have been quite a help.'

'Ah ha!' said Bramwell. 'That, my dear Duck, has given me a very good idea. I really think this one might work.'

SWINGERS AND GLIDERS

AT FIRST SIGHT, THE CANOPY CAN APPEAR AS AN UNBROKEN MASS OF FOLIAGE. YET CANOPY TREES RARELY TOUCH, AND ARE USUALLY SEPARATED BY A METRE (3 FEET) OR SO, POSSIBLY AS A PROTECTION AGAINST DISEASE AND INFESTATION. THE ANIMALS THAT LIVE THERE MUST FIND WAYS TO BRIDGE THESE GAPS BY CLIMBING, SWINGING, LEAPING AND GLIDING.

- 3 COMMON SQUEEGLER MONKEY These small monkeys live in groups of up to 500 individuals. They move nimbly through the canopy and are light enough to dance to the ends of branches to pick fruit. They don't use their tails for climbing but for balance.
- 5 MAID ORANG This monkey has a short tail, and is small enough to climb through the densest ferns and logs. It eats fruit, small leaves and some insects, and can travel up to 4.8 km (3 miles) a day.
- 6 GLIDING ANT This tree-dwelling ant has evolved the ability to glide. So if it falls or is knocked off a branch, it is able to steer itself through the air to return to the same tree. It uses its hind, wide, knobby legs and abdomen like wings to control its flightpath.
- 8 GLIDING TREE FROG This frog has fringed skin on the outside of its thighs and large webbed hands to spread out in its hands. It can glide up to 15 m (50 feet) as a parachute and the frog is able to escape predators (49 feet) or move between treetops to escape enemies.
- 9 BEARDED CAPUCHIN MONKEY When climbing through the canopy, bearded capuchin monkeys rely on their powerful arms. Their powerful arms and long arms are free to gather or carry food. They have even been observed walking up vertical tree trunks.
- 10 BLACK SPIDER MONKEY This monkey has very long limbs and a long tail (up to 85 cm or 2.8 feet), and is an agile climber. Its tail is prehensile, meaning it can grasp things on its own. It can swing from branch to branch by the tail and use its tail to grab things while the monkey is climbing or swinging through the trees.

PLANET EARTH

Earth is a rather ordinary planet located on the outskirts of the Universe. Its inhabitants, known as Earthlings, hold a deep belief that their planet is exceptional.

Earth is one of trillions of planets that exist in the Universe.
It orbits around a star Earthlings call the Sun.

Earth isn't a particularly distinctive planet. It's one of the smaller bodies in its Solar System and is 11 times smaller than Jupiter.

There are billions of Earth-like planets in the Universe. They are similar in size to Earth and all orbit their own stars, in the same way Earth orbits the Sun.

The Incident at Camp UFO

Frankie turned to her and smiled. "Thanks, Xinyi. It's probably best we know exactly what it is when we tell—" "Or," interrupted Val, "we DON'T tell anyone and fish it out ourselves!" The gang looked down at the glow once more. Pawan nodded slowly. "Yeah. I mean, do you KNOW how much meteorites go for online?" He said, biting his lip. "Like, mucho gold coins. Plus, still hoping for superpowers here..." "Yeah! Come on Frank-le-plank," beamed Val, "I wanna make people explode!"

Frankie sighed. She saw what this was. Just because she was older – just because she wasn't suggesting stupid things like FISHING FOR (potentially) MAGIC SPACE ROCKS – they were making her be the mum. The sensible one. The leader. Frankie took a deep breath. Not today. Not this entire summer, actually. She had decided in the car that this summer, she wasn't going to be in charge of ANYTHING. Especially not Val.

"Yeah, okay. Let's get the meteorite out of the lake," the new, relaxed go-with-the-flow Frankie replied. "So... how are we going to do that?"

How COULD the gang fish the meteorite out the lake? When you think you've got it, turn to the next page - or check the answer at the back!

Hint: Try skipping back a few pages and see if there's any helpful lake-related gear!

THE STAGE

THE STAGE OF THE GLOBE was still basically the platform that travelling players had used but with a permanent roof overhead. As soon as the last of three trumpet blasts warned that the play was starting, the opening players strode onto stage. They had to capture the audience's attention at once, without the help of a rising curtain or dimmed lights. Everything depended on the way they moved and spoke. Voices and gestures had to be commanding, so the style of acting was more exaggerated than we are used to today. Star players drew the crowds. At the Globe, the Chamberlain's Men could count on big audiences for their lead player, Richard Burbage. He was a great tragic actor and was the first to play Shakespeare's great characters, Othello, Hamlet and King Lear.

Preps

The water side doors allowed big props such as chariots, thrones and trees to be wheeled on.

For a big procession, even stage-entrances and gateways had to creep up and come on stage.

The audience loved improvisation. People in the galleries tried to get a better view.

Opporting the winding gear

Musicians in the gallery

In the gallery, a drummer and a lutanist awaited their cues (above). Music, from lutes, sackbuts, trumpets and pipes was an important element in most plays, and for the jig (comic dance) that was performed afterwards.

There was no stage scenery of the sort we are used to today. The setting of a scene was indicated by bringing on appropriate objects on stage, such as a throne, a general's tent, or a box hedge to hide behind.

Stagekeeper

Boy apprentice players were fitted out with women's costumes (right) from the tiring men's store. They had to practice walking in a skirt.

They apprentice dressed for a woman's role

Stagekeepers were in charge of keeping items in the props store.

THE STAGE

The same 'jacks' (left) were used in many plays and were a big part of the company's assets. Carrying or pushing them on and off stage was the job of the stagekeepers.

The platform of the stage (above) was at the ground level, eye level so that they all had a clear view of the players. It was supported with strongly-beamed wooden preps, allowing for storage space in-between. There had to be space left for players to surprise the audience by gaining entry to the stage via a ladder and trapdoor.

The underneath of the stage was hidden at the front by boards or by cloth hangings that could be altered to suit the play. The back wall of the stage could be altered too, with tapestries, banners and painted cloths.

"I'll have grounds More relative than this: the play's the thing Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the king." Hamlet, Act II Scene II

Tales from Beyond the Stars

The other vessel, terrified by this development, rushed below decks to hide, but my scientific curiosity was greater than my fear. I stood on the poop deck and called to the boat "so large I cannot reach from here to here" - setting who I was, and what I intended to do here.

Of course, he could not hear me! To his huge size, my voice was like that from the most remote building in a great, flat, bringing up one of the microscopes, he examined it, and so could see that I was on deck, gazing at him and moving my mouth.

"It is unnecessary," he said to the boat from below. "There is a creature here looking at my own eyes, and at drawing the eye of it taking the form of an intelligent being. Right the conclusions of this eye would be intelligent!"

"You are likely that not without speaking with him," the Captain replied.

And so Microscopist set our ship upon a metallic globe with his eye and divided a powerful microscope above. To us, viewed the boat, it seemed that the eye had changed colour and before our eyes moved happily shown in the light with which Microscopist illuminated his microscope glass was wider and brighter than the Sun had ever been, and the distance of the most land, from our perspective, looked like a smooth, clear ocean. From time to time, great clouds, white like the new sky, drifted back and forth - Microscopist and his companion walking about.

A JOURNEY INTO THE UNKNOWN

The dream of reaching off Earth is very old. In the second century AD, Lucian of Samosata imagined it more or less powerfully enough to fly into the air and off the way to the Moon. In the 17th century, Robert Boyle imagined it more or less powerfully enough to fly into the air and off the way to the Moon. In the 18th century, John De La Hire imagined it more or less powerfully enough to fly into the air and off the way to the Moon. In the 19th century, John De La Hire imagined it more or less powerfully enough to fly into the air and off the way to the Moon. In the 20th century, John De La Hire imagined it more or less powerfully enough to fly into the air and off the way to the Moon. In the 21st century, John De La Hire imagined it more or less powerfully enough to fly into the air and off the way to the Moon.

Her set up microscopes on tripods and made great use of them, sending small projectiles sailing into the air to fall precisely five miles ahead and explode with the force of eight-inch shells, such as we used in the First World War.

The Plan soldiers were easy to subdue. Under cover the Red Blood going members, who knew they were fighting for their very lives. The Plan seemed too shocked by the new hat of our object to be able to fight back.

Some Plan soldiers moved through the sky overhead, but they could not use their Winchester repeaters for fear of hitting their own, and when I launched a rocket that exploded one of them, they flew off, over the Atlantic and away.

In less than an hour the battle was over, and New York was ours.

The effectiveness of our humane tactics established a confidence in our ability to overcome the Plan. As I pointed out to Wilms, "It has been my belief of along that the American airplane maker is a far more efficient weapon than the dangerous ray of the Plan, since we can train all our gangs to use systematically and in a coordinated fashion. The day may surely reveal its source of automation. The rocket gun does not fly so it can reach its target only in a straight line. The rocket may be made to travel in an arc, over interesting obstacles, to an unseen target."

Confident Wilms, "The Fridge of Doom points squarely at the Plan today." "I said 'And unless you get involved in the struggle, we shall have to use America's own threat against this land.'"

The soldiers scurried and ran, struggling to right their cannons, all aimed into the pit, to bear on this new target. But they were too slow! The giant tripod stepped easily amongst them, shooting its heat ray at this gun and that, and in moments the artillery was all destroyed. Only one gun got off a shot, and it whistled past the tripod's legs and fell away into the far reaches of the common.

Now everything was chaos. Soldiers took up position, aiming their rifles and firing. The civilians were swarming away, screaming and shouting, running for their lives. I heard the snap of rifle fire and the ping as bullets bounced off the metal hood of the Martian machine, but I too was running, lumbering up a slope and away.

It was going uphill that saved my life, for the Martian tripod now deployed a second weapon: a noxious black smoke pouring out of the rear of its cockpit, sinking through the air and asphyxiating all upon whom it fell. By the time I had reached the top of the hill I looked down upon a terrible scene: the black smoke was everywhere in the hollow, rolling like a foul mist, and all human resistance had been extinguished.

From the Martian tripod came an awful, howling cry, loud enough to bowl me over. I pressed my hands to my ears but the sound penetrated: ulaaaaah!

I stumbled away from the common, the horrible shrieks of the Martian splitting the air behind me.

My bicycle was lost. My clothes were covered in dirt. I hid behind a wall for a while to catch my breath and listened: screams, crashes, the cackling sound of burning buildings, the thud of tripods - for there were several now - stomping about the countryside, and again and again the cries of ulaaaaah!

THE FIRST RAILWAYS

It is strange to think that they have only been around as we know them for about two hundred years.

Pushing Jolly went on to influence many other engineers. The first public railway to use steam locomotives, the Stockton and Darlington Railway in England, opened in 1825. It was designed by George Stephenson, who went on to be known as the Father of Railways for his influential role in so many early schemes.

THE GAUGE

One of Stephenson's most significant decisions was to use the gauge for British railways. The gauge is the distance between the rails and is measured from the inside edge of one rail to the other. By using the same gauge in different railways, Stephenson could ensure that the trains were compatible when they crossed the border in a gauge of 4'6" (1.37m), which became known as the "standard gauge". Today, more than half of the world's railways use this gauge.

The standard gauge was not used in its crude, medieval Kingdom of Britain, engineer of the British Great Western Railway, decided to build wider gauge when he designed the first line between London and Bristol, which opened in 1826. The wider tracks, set at a width of 7'6" (2.29m), allowed for more stability at speed, and bigger vehicles which could carry greater loads. Unfortunately for Bristol, his ideas never took hold to compare, and by 1825 all the tracks had been converted to the narrower gauge of his rival, Stephenson.

STEAM LOCOMOTIVES

Once the possibility of steam-powered engines had been realized, a whole host of locomotives were tried and tested around the world. Some proved too heavy, others too unreliable and some were too dangerous, but the arrival of one revolutionary design changed the course of history. Rocket, designed by engineer Robert Stephenson (George Stephenson's son - see page 8) was to provide the principal design for the vast majority of steam locomotives that follow.

of steam locomotives that followed.

Water flows the fine pores through the barrier via smaller tubes. The barrier has the water to boiling point, raising the steam pressure.

As the pressure builds, the steam is directed to the expansion. These are controlled by valves, which act like a gas in a car. The steam pressure does not expand outside the expansion, sending the wheels on a rail which connects them.

strengthened the capital area and moved the focus of the industrial area away from the capital area, the economy, helping to improve and increase efficiency. But the policy had not been put into practice.

ELECTRIC LOCOMOTIVES

The first electric train was tested as far back as 1837. Unlike steam trains, electric locomotives do not carry fuel on-board. Instead, they are powered by electricity which can be supplied from overhead lines, a third rail or in storage such as batteries. Because electric trains can be powered by renewable energy sources, they are considered less polluting than steam or diesel trains.

The first electric passenger train was presented by Werner von Siemens at an exhibition in Berlin in 1879. Consisting of a small locomotive and three cars, it reached a speed of just 13km/h.

The ETR 200 is a record-breaking electric passenger train. It is widely considered one of the first ever high-speed trains and was put into service in 1936. In 1939, it broke the speed record for trains by reaching just over 201km/h.

The ICE (InterCity Express) is one of Germany's most successful electric trains. The third generation ICE 3, can reach speeds of 300km/h. Since 2018, it has run on entirely renewable energy sources.

DIESEL LOCOMOTIVES

In a diesel locomotive, the power comes from an engine that burns diesel oil. While a steam locomotive needed two people to crew it and hours to attain the right steam pressure, a diesel locomotive could simply be switched on and driven away, making them much easier and much cheaper to run. Rudolf Diesel patented his first diesel engine in 1898, but it wasn't until around 1912 that they were first used in a locomotive.

The famous DRG Class SVT 877 Hamburg Flyer, often referred to as the 'Flying Hamburger', was first put into service in 1933. Its smooth, rounded shape was influenced by Zeppelin airships allowing for minimal air resistance.

The Delic, built in 1956, was considered the most powerful diesel locomotive in the world at that time.

The Intercity 125 is one of the most successful diesel trains of all time. So named because it was designed to cruise at 125 mph (about 201 km/h) when in service, it also holds the all-time speed record for diesel trains of 238 km/h, which it reached in 1987.

- RAILWAYS OF THE WORLD - THE FFESTINIOG RAILWAY

The Flintshire railway in North Wales is a marvel of 19th century engineering. It was built to transport slate for roof tiles from the quarries around the town of Bannau Flintshire, high up in the mountains of Snowdonia, down to the harbour at Porthlanding. It opened in 1834 when a narrow gauge of 5ft 6in was used; the narrow gauge is now in the process of being replaced by a standard gauge.

By the 1950s, the railway was generating so much revenue that it was able to finance its own expansion. There was also increasing interest for a passenger service. The solution was for several short routes, originally for locomotives in the world. By 1960, there were six routes in the world.

Street Style: Dr. Martens

The original pair of Dr. Martens' AirWair shoes were still a far cry from the instantly recognisable models the brand is known for today. The uppers were much more minimal in decoration and the soles were much wider with a very visible contrast thanks to a lighter coloured sole.

The first mass produced designs have more in common with a modern-day hybrid dress shoe than the sleek, utilitarian shapes of popular Dr. Martens styles, now set atop a semi-transparent lug sole. Perhaps the unintentionally fashion-forward aesthetic is one of the reasons why women gravitated towards them long before most conservatively-dressed men did. It's hard to imagine one trying to pull these off within the strict dress codes of the 1950s, when leather-soled, dark hard bottom footwear was still the norm for doing business. But looking back now, it set the perfect stage for what Dr. Martens would become: the ultimate anti-dress shoe.

The Birth of Bouncing Soles

Now that you've briefly had a glimpse at Dr. Martens' future, it's time to rediscover the past. How did a German town-based business so distinctively British? That story begins in 1901. A man named Benjamin Griggs and his business partner, Ephraim Jones began a company to manufacture boots in Wallaston, north Northamptonshire. By 1901, they had incorporated as R. Griggs & Co. Ltd., eventually becoming the R. Griggs Group.

In just a couple of decades, Wallaston had become one of England's shoe-making capitals. As early as 1881, one of its shoe factories was established as a workers' co-operative of local cobbleries (incidentally 'The Buffers'), and it was even today as the Northamptonshire Productive Society, still making shoes as 1920s, where it manufactures many well-known high-end footwear brands.

But the R. Griggs Group continued to flourish well into the 1950s under the leadership of Bill Griggs, who inherited the family business around that time. His fortune would grow even more when he decided to take a risk in 1959. Backing on the success of their fledgling footwear business, Dr. Klaus Martens and Dr. Robert Fark began soliciting advertisements for Dr. Martens' AirWair shoes in international magazines. Griggs saw the fit in this innovative air-cushioned sole by two German doctors and instantly recognised its potential. After all, having grown up in factories his whole life, he understood the need for sturdy, robust work boots, but also knew how uncomfortable they could be.

Ironically, the rest of his family disagreed with his foresight, seeing the air-cushioned sole as a gimmick, the kind of flack in the past that would fade out over time while leather-soled boots would be around forever. But he treated his intuition and went ahead to meet with Dr. Martens and Dr. Fark, later developing a rapport with them and taking the exclusive licence for their AirWair-soled shoes in the United Kingdom.

ABOVE: The Griggs, longtime owner of the R. Griggs Group that went on to own all of Dr. Martens.

Mod Squad

One of the most prominent British music subcultures to arise in the 1960s and early 1960s was the Mod subculture – or 'Mod' for short. Musical taste was just one part of the complete lifestyle. Mods were dressed with clean-cut fashion pieces like polo shirts, suit and military issue M-51 field jackets, especially ones embellished with the signature roundel of the Royal Air Force. It was a subculture focused on executing everything with intention – the hair you had, the clothes you wore, the music you listened to and the scooter you drove.

As avid fans of The Who, it's no surprise that Dr. Martens became an inimitable part of Mod's uniform. The sleek lines of the boots looked good with suits and usually complemented the minimalist style of the subculture and could also be worn on the Mod vehicle of choice: the Vespa scooter.

RIGHT: Two scooter-riding mods take a breather outside Haringey's Alexandra Road in 1965.

In contrast, the leather-soled subculture of Rockers who favoured leather motorcycle jackets, creepers, engineer boots and R&B as effeminate, and numerous physical altercations between the two groups led to a moral panic about the rise of sexually youth. Boys wore the Mods eventually won out as their way of dress slowly seeped into the British mainstream, leading to the flowering London phase of the 1960s. But as all trends go, as one fad falls out of fashion, another one is right behind it to take its place.

The Spring Behind Every Step

It's hard to believe that an orthopaedic shoe could be synonymous with rebellious style around the world. Yet that is what the Dr. Martens brand continues to represent to millions of its ardent fans.

It can be challenging to maintain one's cool factor over the decades, but by intentionally aligning itself with subcultural style, the nearly octogenarian footwear manufacturer hasn't lost a single step when it comes to cultivating an alternative type of timeless footwear. Considering the United Kingdom also has a rich history of fine Savile Row tailoring, Scottish wools and ruggedly elegant Harris Tweeds, fashion houses like Burberry and tastefully tough outerwear from brands like Barbour, Dr. Martens is singular in that canon of classic British style. Indeed, Dr. Martens is a staunch iconoclast, a bastion of anti-establishment ideals for people who prefer to dress against the grain.

But despite the modern connotation of what Dr. Martens has become, its roots are built on a comfortable foundation. Dr. Klaus Martens first conceived of the footwear's signature 'AirWair' sole while recuperating from a World War II foot injury.

Finding his standard-issue German Army boot severely uncomfortable for his ailing foot, he utilised soft leather for the upper and repurposed tyre rubbers to create an air-padded sole. The resulting shoe is equal parts built to last and equal parts built to live in. It's no wonder that punk rockers and hip-hop artists alike have graced thousands of stages in a pair of Dr. Martens over the years – it's a shoe made for those who live out loud. The story of how a purpose-driven product came to define one of today's most exciting lifestyle brands is one that spans a growing connection between clothing and culture. When you combine a timeless product with a chameleon-like ability to mean different things to different people, you get a shoe that is undeniably trend-proof.

Street Style: Nike

Visual history of the iconic street style brand.

- Illustrated with full colour photographs showcasing the brand's history.
- Cover finishes: mat lam and foil.
- Written by sneaker connoisseur Gerald Flores. With over a decade of journalistic experience, Gerald is fascinated by the people, designers and stories behind sneakers. He has interviewed personalities including Kobe Bryant, Tinker Hatfield and Virgil Abloh.

Street Style: Nike

Nike's terms included $500,000 in cash for five years, an endorsement figure that was unprecedented in that era. The highest sneaker endorsement before 1984 was New Balance's deal with the Los Angeles Lakers' Larry Bird for $150,000 a year for eight years. Other perks offered to Jordan included stock options and a custom-built shoe for the basketball player to play in.

There were some stipulations, however. Nike wrote a clause in the initial contract that required Jordan to accomplish one of three things - win NBA Rookie of the Year, to become an All-Star, or to average 20 points per game within his first three years. If Jordan didn't, Nike reserved the right to end the deal two years early.

By the time Jordan's first year in the NBA ended, he averaged 28 points per game after playing every game of the season. Not only did he win Rookie of the Year honors during the 1984-85 season, but the rising star became the darling of the League with his acrobatic style of play that made the name of his signature Nike shoe synonymous: Air Jordan.

Nike made over $500 million in revenue thanks to the sale of Air Jordans by the end of that first year - a new industry standard for how trends would market, design and storytelling through signature products was set.

Max Blackman's marketing campaign still made way for new icons to step in to advertise the Air Jordan 7. Bugs Bunny and the Looney Tunes. Among the number 'Three Jordan' Bugs joined Jordan for a series of memorable commercials and print ads promoting the Air Jordan 7. One notable iteration of the shoe was a white-based colorway nicknamed 'Hare', paying homage to Bugs' involvement.

The Air Jordan 7 gained even more mainstream exposure when Jordan showcased the 'Bordeaux' colorway in Michael Jackson's music video for 'Scream'. This collaboration between the two biggest cultural icons of their time further solidified the Air Jordan 7's place in sneaker and pop culture history.

Nike Air Max 180

The Nike Air Max 180 was a collaborative effort between two giants in the footwear design industry: Timberland and Bruce Kilgore. At the time of its creation in 1991, Timberland was renowned for his groundbreaking work on previous Air Max models, pushing the boundaries of sneaker design and technology. Meanwhile, Kilgore had achieved legendary status for his iconic creation, the Air Force 1. Together, they set out to make Air Max bigger and better than it had ever been.

The duo's goal for the shoe was to once again make Nike's patented Air technology larger and more visible than it had ever been. To achieve this, they based it on a horseshoe concept for the Air unit, which allowed for increased visibility along the sides and underneath of the shoe. They utilized a time molding process to create a version of the bag that provided maximum visibility and impact absorption. Moreover, the Air 180 was the first shoe to feature a swooshbase outside moulded directly to the Air unit, further enhancing its visibility and performance capabilities. The heightened visibility of the Air technology directly inspired the name Air 180.

During a period when Michael Jordan's endorsement could significantly impact any product, he was photographed wearing a pair of Nike Air 180s in the 'Concept' colorway for a photo shoot preceding the 1992 Olympics. This high-profile shoot provided the Air 180 model with exposure to a wider audience and bolstered its mainstream appeal.

While the Nike Air 180 didn't initially receive the same level of fanfare as its contemporaries, its significance and appreciation have grown considerably over the years. As time has passed, the Air 180 has emerged as a standout and essential release within the Nike Air Max series.

OPPOSITE: The Nike Air Max 180 in original colorway of white, charcoal and blue red.

'Well, I don't love it,' Knight was heard saying upon the first review. 'But it will grow on me.'

The Swoosh definitely grew on Knight as the shape also bore a resemblance to the wings on the Greek goddess that Nike was named after. It would go on to become one of the most well-known logos in the world.

While Davidson was initially paid just $35 for her design, Knight saw her as one of the original minds behind the brand and wanted to acknowledge this. In 1983, the founder rewarded Davidson with 500 shares of Nike, as well as a golden ring with a Swoosh-shaped diamond, which is possibly the biggest remuneration for any logo design in history.

The marking is such a part of Nike culture that every new athlete that signs with the brand is tasked to draw their own version of the Swoosh. There have been different evolutions of the Swoosh and you can see the various iterations if you look through Nike's back-catalogue of products. Designer and Nike collaborator Virgil Abloh nodded to Davidson's original Swoosh design on the cover of his book Something's Off and the marking has been reversed on signature product for eccentric players, like Dennis Rodman's Air Darwin sneaker. But the essence of the Swoosh remains in its simplicity, its elegance and the way it represents movement.

OPPOSITE: Gianni Antetokounmpo's first signature sneaker implemented its performance features in the midsole in the shape of a reverse Nike Swoosh.

Boredom Buster: A Puzzle Activity Book of Spectacular Science

ON THE LEVEL

If you pour water into a series of tubes that are connected together, the water finds the same level in all the tubes.

But some of these tubes have been drawn wrongly! Can you find which tubes contain water at the wrong level?

HINT: It will help if you colour all the tubes connected to jar A red, and all the tubes connected to jar B blue.

All tubes connected to jar A should have water reaching the same level as in jar A. All tubes connected to jar B should have the same water level as jar B.

TRICKS WITH LIGHT

Optical illusions are tricks that fool the eye. They make you see something that's not really there.

Hold the book up in front of you and tilt it to the left or right. What happens to the curved lines in the drawing below?

Can you see a triangle here? There isn't one in the drawing!

Stare very hard at the picture below, then slowly move it towards and away from you. What happens?

Are the sides of the square straight or curved? Check with a ruler.

Are the horizontal lines level or slanting?

PUT THE FISH IN THE BOWL

1. Trace the fish and bowl onto card. Colour them in, then cut out the two circles.

2. Tape the two pictures to a pencil, so both pictures face out.

3. Spin the pencil between your hands. Can you see the fish in the bowl?

DID YOU KNOW? Optical illusions aren't just for fun - they help scientists to understand how the eyes and brain work together.

GERMINATION

Most plants grow from seeds. If you plant a seed in a moist, sunny place it will start to germinate (sprout).

The tough seed coat splits open (1). First, a little root grows downwards (2), so the plant can take in water. Then, a little green shoot begins to grow upwards towards the sky (3). The new plant spreads its leaves in the light (4).

BEANPROUT MAZE
Help the new shoot find its way through the soil towards the light.

You can plant bean sprouts yourself and see how fast they grow!

RISING AIR

When air is heated it rises. This is what makes a hot-air balloon rise. Air spirals upwards in currents called thermals where the sun heats the air near the ground.

This experiment uses the warm air from a radiator.

Colour the snakes, then cut them out to make a spiral. Gently pull the head and tail apart. Use scissors to make a hole in the nose, and attach a string. Hang the snakes over a radiator and watch them spin around!

Tickle Your Brain: Mummy Mania!

CAN YOU BELIEVE IT?

When mummy mania spread across Europe, people were desperate to get their hands on them. Fakes flooded the market – the sellers were in de-NILE about the authenticity of their mummified. Even the very first ones to enter the British Museum were found out to be fakes. The first genuine mummies were acquired by the museum in 1756.

CREEPY TALES FROM THE BRITISH MUSEUM...

Most of the mummies in the British Museum still have their wrappings in place, and no mummy has been unwrapped there since the 1930s. One of the British Museum's most famous mummies is nicknamed 'Ginger' because of his unusual hair colour. It actually predates the time Egyptians began mummifying their dead regularly. Ginger was an adult male who died more than 5,000 years ago and was buried in direct contact with the dry desert sand, which is why his body didn't decay. Like many other early Egyptian mummies, he's an example of a natural mummy, created through specific environmental conditions. He's also thought to be the oldest.

THE MYTH OF 'THE UNLUCKY MUMMY'

After the luxury liner, the Titanic sank in 1912, an unlucky mummy's curse was whispered to be responsible for the disaster. The myth goes something like this:

The mummy-board was said to have been purchased by a young English traveller who visited the archaeological digs in Egypt. He arranged for the coffin to be shipped back to his home, but was not there to receive it. Instead, he and his friends on the same trip all found unfortunate ends: two died or were seriously injured in shooting accidents, and two died after losing their fortune and descending into poverty.

Upon the coffin's arrival in England, it was passed along to one of the traveller's sisters. As soon as it entered her house however, the occupants reported experiencing a series of unfortunate events. Hiring a clairvoyant, an 'evil influence' was reportedly traced back to the mummy-board (decorated wooden cover), and the sister was urged to dispose of 'The Unlucky Mummy' to prevent anymore misfortune. It was therefore presented to the British Museum.

MUMMIFIED AND RATIFIED

Rat 1: The Egyptians mummified a lot of rats, you know.

Rat 2: Are you sure?

Rat 1: Yes - many rat mummies had little coffins, too.

Rat 2: Whatever for?

Rat 1: To keep them safe for the afterlife. It was believed that rats ate the hearts of sinners on judgment day.

Rat 2: Yuck!

Rat 1: And did you know that the pharaohs were mummified with their hands crossed over their chests?

Rat 2: I wonder why?

Rat 1: Maybe they thought there would be lots of water slides in the afterlife. Tee hee!

BACK AT THE MUSEUMS...

Just imagine coming face to face with somebody (yes, some body) who is thousands of years old. You can do just that, as well as admire some of their amazing possessions, in lots of British museums, up and down the country.

The National Museum of Scotland in Edinburgh has a very impressive collection, discovered in Egyptian tombs long ago. The museum houses two particularly interesting mummies: a young woman and child, buried with magnificent gold and luxurious finery around 1550 BC. Her stunning gold painted coffin suggests that the woman may have been a queen. Now known as 'The Qurna Queen', she wore a magnificent collar of gold rings, a pair of gold earrings, two pairs of gold bracelets and a girdle of rings (over 90% pure gold). To stop her getting hungry in the afterlife, she was buried with bread, grapes, dates and a pomegranate. Alas, these are now a tad past their sell-by date!

You can even see what this tall, elegant woman would have looked like. Experts have scanned her skull to help create a realistic model of her face. Why don't you visit, take a peek and say hi!
