Step into the Aviarium and explore the wonderful world of birds!

- A comprehensive overview of the world of birds. Chapters include: birds of prey, flightless birds, seabirds, water birds, tropical birds and garden birds
- Beautifully illustrated by nature artist Teagan White, illustrator of the best-selling Oceanarium
- Written by renowned British birder Dominic Couzens, author and journalist specialising in avian and natural history subjects. He contributes regularly to Bird Watching and BBC Wildlife magazines
- The Welcome to the Museum series has sold over 2 million copies worldwide

Southern Brown Kiwi

If there was a prize for the best bird-like beak, the kiwi's would certainly win. In the bird world, the kiwi is the only bird with a beak that is longer than its head. The kiwi's beak is a powerful tool, used for digging, catching prey, and even for defense. The kiwi's beak is also a key feature in its identification, as it is the only bird with a beak that is longer than its head.

Habitat: Grasslands

Grasslands are the most common habitat on the planet, covering about 40% of the Earth's land area. They are found in all major biomes, from the tropics to the poles. Grasslands are characterized by large, open areas of land with a continuous cover of grass. They are home to a wide variety of animals, including herbivores and carnivores.

Habitat: Cliffs and Islands

Seabirds are highly adapted to the marine environment, but because they have to lay eggs and incubate them, they must at some point go to dry land to breed. This presents problems, because land doesn't suit them. They have webbed feet, which makes perching awkward, and their legs are often set far back on the body for back-propulsion in water, and that may make walking difficult. Many have long wings, making the mechanics of approaching land tricky.

Seabirds' discomfort on land means that they are exceptionally vulnerable to ground predators, usually mammals such as rats, and that often limits them to breeding in places that either lack predators, or sites that are hazardous to predators, such as tall cliffs and precipices. The limited availability of such sites means that the visitors all have to pack together, and virtually all seabirds are colonial.

Not every cliff or island will do. The location must be close to the sea, and it must be within reasonable reach of productive fishing areas. Many seabirds will commute up to about 50km, sometimes much further, but if food is too far away feeding young may be impossible.

With so much crowding, it isn't surprising that different birds occupy different parts of islands or cliffs. Some live on boulders close to the sea, while others pack on to narrow ledges on tall cliffs. Crèches, holes or burrows are sought after refuges for many species, while others, especially bigger birds, need flat, wide ledges – these may need to be windy to help them take off. Sea caves may be ideal, as may be grassland above cliffs, or very low, sandy islands. One of the great delights of this habitat is seeing many types of seabirds, each contributing to the noise, smell and general melee.

Key to plate

1. Red-legged kittiwake
Rissa brevirostris
Length 37cm
Three-quarters of the world's population of this small gull (200,000 pairs) breeds on St George Island in the Shetlands, on towering cliffs. It breeds near deep Arctic waters, catching fish near the surface.
2. Cassin's cormorant
Laccorhynchus occidentalis
Length 71-101cm
Cormorants are seabirds but their plumage is only seen underwater. The feathers become soiled, reducing their buoyancy and making diving more efficient. After swimming, they must hold their wings out to dry. This
- bird is named after the gulls that build up at its colonies, once a major source of food.
3. Crested auklet
Aethya cristata
Length 23-27cm
A member of the family, Pacific murrelets, it breeds in large colonies on cliffs. Remarkably, it produces a large-scale body colour in the breeding season that helps in sexual attraction. The adults can be detected by humans far away from the breeding sites.
4. Atlantic puffin
Fregata aethiops
Length 25-29cm
The worldwide bill of the Atlantic
- puffin, with its backward-facing spine, allows the bird to grip multiple fish at a time to deliver to the young. There are half a million of the birds by the spring tides.
5. Southern rockhopper penguin
Eudyptes chrysater
Length 51-63cm
Being flightless, penguins can only travel on cliffs or rocks accessible from the ocean. These birds progress up slopes with two-footed hops. The Southern rockhopper has two eggs, although usually only one hatches.

Which silhouette matches this Spinosaurus?

Answers

Spinosaurus aegyptiacus
Mid Cretaceous, Egypt
Length: 18m, Weight: 5000kg
Spinosaurus was one of the largest land predators ever. However, unlike other big predators of the Cretaceous period, its skull was long and narrow and full of conical teeth that were ideal for spearing fish.
